Notes from a Retreat at the Seashore

I sat there trying to communicate, asking him many things and telling him how I felt about things. As usual the conversation was one-sided. Time was up and I felt somewhat disappointed. As I stood to leave I bent down to pick up the beach towel and everything became still, the surf, the children on the beach, a complete calm existed and I heard my name:

“Claude, don’t try to be more than you are,
I love you just the way you are.”
